It's high time we think more deeply about the impacts of the steps we've taken in solving global issues. The UN's 2021 Sustainable Development Report clearly demonstrated that progress made since 2020 in critical areas such as poverty, education, and gender equality has stalled or reversed. These negative developments show that the pandemic's widespread effects on the world are not limited to health; they have also profoundly shaken social and economic structures. Moreover, global CO2 emissions are once again approaching record levels, proving how challenging the fight against climate change still is.

The environmental commitments made by countries around the world during this period and the steps they have taken to combat climate change are promising for a sustainable future. However, the current emission levels and rates of environmental degradation are alarming. With global cooperation, we can build a more resilient society not only against pandemics but also against the climate crisis, poverty, and social inequalities. Now is the time to take real, concrete steps to achieve sustainable development goals.

For a sustainable environment, we discharge water to the receiving environment with quality that complies with both the discharge limits we are subject to in the Water Pollution Control Regulation and international legislation and standards.

WASTE MANAGEMENT

Our processes prioritize the reduction, source separation, and reuse of waste generated within our facility by considering the product life cycle.

In our facility, hazardous and non-hazardous wastes are generated. The hazardous wastes are collected in a temporary storage area authorized by the Provincial Directorate of Environment, Urbanization, and Climate Change, and are sent to licensed facilities with licensed vehicles and drivers via the MOTAT (mobile waste tracking) system.

Non-hazardous wastes are also collected in a non-hazardous waste temporary storage area and delivered to licensed facilities. In managing these processes, our Environmental Consultant and an employee responsible for the waste area are involved.

Almost 100% of the hazardous and non-hazardous wastes generated in our facility, such as plastic, glass, paper-cardboard, metal, batteries, and oil, are recycled by licensed facilities.
